

Correcting the Separation Perception

by Dan Joseph

We are all members of one spiritual family – forever joined with each other in a lovely relationship. However, it's easy to lose sight of this fact in the world.

From the world's perspective, everyone seems to be alone and apart. Each of us appears to be a separate entity – disconnected from everyone else.

To add some additional drama, these entities spend time arguing, competing, and struggling with each other. The conflicts can seem endless!

However, the good news is that we aren't really separate entities – regardless of our perceptions to the contrary. We haven't really altered our spiritual bonds. We are still joined in an unbreakable relationship with each other.

As we become willing to accept this, we begin to re-experience our eternal spiritual connection. Our willingness to “look past” the apparent separation is all that's necessary.

As we practice accepting – and experiencing – our connection with the people around us, we begin to realize that we are never truly alone. We begin to feel our connection to every living thing. The false perception of separation is replaced by the experience of our true spiritual union.
